Amsterdam

Art & Antiques Fair

Art treasure hunting

Looking for a unique work of art or a classic piece of jewellery? At PAN Amsterdam – held at the RAI Amsterdam convention centre – you can visit some 125 galleries and see thousands of objects, ranging from paintings, antiques and photos to jewellery and furniture. Experts verify the authenticity and quality of the pieces before the fair opens. 20-27 Nov; pan.nl

1. In 1958, Willy Rizzo photographed Italian actress Sophia Loren (1934) in Hollywood.
2. Gerrit Rietveld (1888-1964) designed the 'Zig-Zag' chair in 1934.
3. Ken Moody and Robert Sherman, photographed by Robert Mapplethorpe (1946-1989) in 1984.

Exhibition

Capturing glamour

He was the last to photograph Marilyn Monroe, charmed Marlene Dietrich into a rare photo shoot and took one of the few known photographs of Coco Chanel laughing. Italian photographer Willy Rizzo (1928-2013) had a way with the rich & famous, and captured many icons – ranging from Sophia Loren to Salvador Dali – during his long career. Three years after his passing, Gallery Vassie pays tribute to the glamour photographer's work with the exhibition The Genius of Willy Rizzo. Until 1 Dec; galleryvassie.com

“Amsterdam is like the rings of a tree; it gets older once you get closer to the centre”

John Green (1977), American author

IDFA

Docu fest

With prizes, workshops and business opportunities for professionals, and a versatile programme for visitors, the International Documentary Festival Amsterdam (IDFA) annually transforms the city's main cinemas into a documentary paradise in November. This year's programme includes O.J.: Made in America (about notorious former American football player and murder suspect O.J. Simpson) and Mapplethorpe: Look at the Pictures about the controversial photographer Robert Mapplethorpe. 16-27 Nov; idfa.nl

Eating out

New tasty concepts

In a city like Amsterdam, new restaurant concepts pop up like mushrooms. Here are three hotspots with an original take on familiar cuisine.

Bar Kauffmann

This fresh and intimate café-restaurant in the city's up-and-coming Baarsjes district offers a surprising combination of different types of falafel and craft – often locally brewed – beers. All dishes are freshly made and come with tasty sides, such as sweet potato fries and healthy salads. The friendly staff, laid-back atmosphere and endless offer of great beers make you stay long after your falafel sandwich is finished. barkauffmann.nl

FRNZY

Craving for a croque monsieur while your lunch partner prefers some fresh spring rolls? Well, you can get both at French-Vietnamese breakfast and lunch spot FRNZY in the Pijp neighbourhood. Their smoothie bowls have become a local favourite and the bánh mì (a baguette with coriander, Asian radish, cucumber, chilli and aioli) makes you feel like you're in Saigon. frnzyamsterdam.com

The Breakfast Club

Whoever said breakfast can only be served in the morning? The Breakfast Club – in the city centre – serves American pancakes, omelettes, waffles and more delicious breakfast dishes all day long. They do have another menu, featuring burgers and steaks, as well, plus a wide range of cocktails. thebreakfastclub.nl
